Over 20 Security Council resolutions exist that pertain to the CTC and CTED, an overwhelming majority of which were adopted over the last decade. This demonstrates the complexity of the evolution of the threat of terrorism, which has prompted the Security Council to adopt resolutions outlining new measures for Member States to undertake in order to effectively counter the emerging threat of terrorism. ï

e expert assessments in their development of technical assistance and capacity-building projects. The resolution further underlines the essential role of CTED within the United Nations to identify and assess issues, trends, and developments related to the implementation of all relevant Security Council resolutions.
